

Summary

We have constructed essential components of a 'computer experiment' to investigate possible mechanisms for voltage-dependent gating in ion channels. A self-consistent treatment of electrostatics couples the macroscopic control variable, voltage, via a microscopic physical model, to the observable macroscopic variable, gating current.

We have used this tool to explore energetics and other aspects of S4 motion.